DETAILED ACTION

- 1. The Request for Continued Examination filed July 9, 2004 has been approved. The Amendment filed May 10, 2004 is herby considered. According to the Amendment, claims 1, 4, and 7-9 have been amended. Currently, claims 1-11 are pending in this application. Acknowledgment has been made.
- 2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
 - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 3. Claims 1-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rieder (5,769,718) in view of Stephens et al. (6,155,923).

Rieder teaches a video game device and method comprising an image of a player character, images of non-player characters (antagonist characters), and background images; predetermining a plurality of operational modes which are assigned to player character (fighting mode, moving mode, etc.), and preparing an image corresponding to each operational mode; displaying an image of the player character corresponding to any one of plurality of operational modes and images of non-player characters, simultaneously with any one of the background images (Fig. 6); the image of the player character is an image displaying the player character in a state where it is carrying a weapon; a fighting mode representing a state wherein the player character is able to fight using the weapon; and a moving mode representing a state wherein the character moves while carrying the weapon (Fig. 5). See Figures 4-8 and columns 2:11-5 and 5-8. Rieder does not explicitly teach the limitations of background images that display scenes adjacent to each other in location (claims 1, 4, and 7-9); restricting the switching of the background images from the start until completion of an operational mode (claims 1, 4, 7, 8, and 9); information relating to background images is determined on the basis of the video RAM capacity of the video device (claims 2 an 5).

Stephens et al., however, teaches a video game system and methods for enhanced processing and display of graphical character elements comprising background images that display scenes adjacent to each other in location (Figure 1); restricting the switching of the background images from the start until completion of an operational mode (5:36-48); information relating to background images is determined on the basis of the video RAM capacity of the video device (5:2-10:43). See also, Figures 1-6 and columns 1-4.

Thus, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to combine Rieder's with a video game system and methods for enhanced processing and display of graphical character elements, as taught by Stephens et al., to come up with a more affordable and faster video game processing device thus attract more game players and increase profit in sales.

- 4. Claims 10 and 11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
- 5. Applicant's arguments filed May 10, 2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant's argument regarding Stephens et al.'s game system required no mechanical operation to access the ROM cartridge (applicant's remark, page 7, last paragraph bridging page 8). This limitation, however, has not been claimed by the applicant.

Further, regarding the amended feature of "switching between background images requires a finite and unacceptable delay" which has been amended to the preamble of claims 1,4, and 7-9 (applicant's remark, page 7, paragraphs 3-4); this feature does not further limit the claims since no functional step or process has been provided in the body of the claim to further define the switching rate of the images.
